NOTES IN SEASON.

LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY announce that 103,132 copies of "Eben Holden" were sold in twenty-eight consecutive business days.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have in preparation a historical work by W. H. Wilkins, entitled "Caroline of Anspach," which will throw much light on court life and manners of English society during the reigns of the first two Georges.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish shortly a new novel by Julien Gordon (Mrs. J. S. Cruger), entitled "Mrs. Clyde." The story is founded on the facts in the career of a most brilliant and cultivated American woman. The scene shifts from Boston to Rome and from Rome to New York.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. are protecting their beautiful edition of "An Englishwoman's Love Letters" at great sacrifice. No matter what inducements any other publisher may offer, Doubleday, Page & Co. will furnish their books at equally low prices. They were first in the market with a beautifully made book.

BRENTANO's are the sole publishers in the United States of "L'Aiglon" in French under a United States copyright. They have fixed and established the retail prices of this work at $1.50 in cloth and $1 in paper. These are net prices. Brentano's expect that the full retail prices will be asked and maintained.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have nearly ready a "Life of Lord Monboddo," (James Burnett,) the author of a work on the origin of language, and one on ancient metaphysics. Lord Monboddo will be remembered by readers of Boswell's Johnson as the central figure of a brilliant literary circle in Great Britain during the 18th century. He was the connecting link between the ancients and Darwin on the theories of evolution.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have secured the American market of a work of exceptional importance, entitled "Turner and Ruskin: an exposition of the paintings by J. M. W. Turner, with full descriptive and critical passages from the works of John Ruskin," edited and arranged, with a biographical note on Turner, by Frederick Wedmore. The work will be in two quarto volumes, illustrated with about ninety photogravure plates from the original pictures.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready "The North Americans of Yesterday," a comparative study of North American Indian life, customs, and products on the theory of the ethnic unity of the race, by Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, with about 350 illustrations; "The Laws of Scientific Hand-Reading," by William G. Benham, a practical treatise on palmistry, with 800 illustrations from life; and "The Story of the Thirteen Colonies," by Helen A. Smith, the new addition to the Story of the Nations Series.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have published a pamphlet of interest to readers of James Lane Allen's "The Reign of Law," containing an article on the story by President McGarvey of the College of the Bible, in the University of Kentucky; Mr. Allen's reply to President McGarvey; a sermon preached in Kansas City by the Rev. J. E. Roberts; an article by Rabbi A. Moses of Louisville, Ky.; a sermon by the Rev. John W. Chadwick of Brooklyn; also opinions by the Rev. E. L. Powell of Louisville, Ky.; the Rev. David Utter of Denver, Col., and the Rev. Leigh Gordon Giltner of Eminence, Ky.

THE C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING COMPANY of Boston, who have made a signal success with their first production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," are very much gratified to learn, upon making a canvass of several of the bookstores in that city, that this novel stood second in the list of best selling books in December. Judging from the continuation of the demand for the book, even since Christmas, they have reason for feeling confident that the novel will lead in January sales. They report that they have just received the artist's water color sketches for seven illustrations of this novel and Damrell & Upham's Old Corner Bookstore exhibit them in their windows commencing to-day.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JANUARY 12, 1901.

"EDITORS' COPIES."

It is perhaps not realized what considerable numbers of new books are sent out by publishers as editors' copies, amounting in the case of books of small editions to a considerable proportion of the entire issue. The increasing number of important daily papers which give more or less attention to books, and the still greater increase in the number of literary or semi-literary papers have made necessary a considerable increase in the number of review copies sent out, with the incidental result of interfering in some cases with normal retail trade. The expenditure of publishers in this direction of course receives a quid pro quo, when an important periodical devotes space and attention to a book far in excess of the value of the book itself, and publishers are cheerfully ready to obtain this gratuitous advertising, which is equally of value to the readers of the periodical and to the publisher of the book. The publisher has it of course within his right to cut down his editors' list as he likes and the whole matter is quite within his control. Of course many books sent out for press notice escape notice in this or that periodical because the rush of books in these latter days is far beyond the possibilities of any journal, except those of technical record like THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, to notice or even record, for a journal of first importance will now receive 2000 or 3000 volumes in a year. But on the whole the system is one of fair exchange and even balance.

The abuse to which it is open is the sale of editors' copies for retail purposes. It is too often a practice of respectable periodicals to treat copies received for review as a source of revenue and sell them either regularly or spasmodically to dealers who make it a special business to "cut rates," like the railroad agent, and find special opportunity in this class of purchases. It seems proper to suggest that editors' copies ought not to be treated in this way. The practice varies very much among the several newspapers and other periodicals.

In some cases the much better method adopted for disposing of such books has been that of a private sale among the members of the editorial staff from time to time, in which those who bid in more than their fair proportion of the books pay the excess in money which is received by those who have bought less than their share, the sales being made with the understanding that the purchaser is bidding for himself and not to make outside disposition of the books. In other cases books are distributed directly among the members of the staff and the residuum sent to a free library. In other cases books are sent to the local free library, which may perhaps somewhat unfairly deprive the publisher of the sale of one copy, but does not have the further result of demoralizing his market. In some flagrant cases, books sent for review are hurried out of editorial offices to "book butchers" the very day of their receipt, to get the price advantage while they are fresh in the market; and in such cases publishers should protect themselves by ceasing to send editors' copies. Some publishers take preventive steps by stamping the words "editorial copy" on the title-page, but this does not seem quite a courteous method.

We suggest to our brother editors that publishers are entitled in reciprocal courtesy to protection against this method, not usually thought out to its consequences, of interference with their own trade; and we trust that this word of suggestion may have its influence in remedying a small abuse which sometimes has large results.

PRINTING WITHOUT TYPE.

"THERE seems to be a likelihood," according to an editorial writer in the Saturday Evening Post, "that before long movable types for printing will be done away with altogether, and their function, hitherto regarded as indispensable in the art, performed by ingenious photographic processes. The books of the near future, it is predicted, will be made by photography, and it is not improbable that even newspapers will be issued by methods in which the camera and dry-plate will take the place of the font of metal letters and the stereotype from a paper matrix.

This is not mere speculation, inasmuch as the prediction is based upon recently patented inventions of a practical character. The originator of the idea proposes to apply to the reproduction of letterpress a process not very different from that already used in the mechanical multiplication of pictures. In his belief, if a picture can be multiplied by photography, there is no reason why the same method should not be employed with the text that is to be reproduced. A camera, placed in front, will photograph the letters, its distance from them determining the size of the text as it is eventually to appear. The negative thus made will be developed in the usual manner. It only remains to etch the plate and print from it, just as a picture similarly prepared is printed nowadays.

"A machine has already been constructed which, taking the place of the Linotype or mechanical compositor of to-day, sets up the cards in the rack according to copy, and photographs them, one line at a time, the glass sensitive plate moving automatically at such a rate as to take the matter line by line until it is filled. Then, of course, it is removed and developed in a dark room, whereupon it is ready to transfer its imprint to the metal plate, which is duly etched. The process is simple enough, and so expeditiously performed that within thirty minutes from the first exposure of the negative the zinc plate is ready to go to press.

"This has every appearance of being an epoch-making invention. Hitherto it has been imagined that movable types represented the ultimate step in the art of printing; yet they now bid fair to be superseded by the camera and the dry-plate. If the discovery does not prove disappointing in its practical usefulness it will be of enormous advantage to the publisher of the future whose expensive and heavy burden of type will be replaced by a few photographic machines and an equipment of lettered cards, light and easily stored in small space. The fact that one set of letters is to serve for all sizes of type is of the greatest importance.

"One point not to be forgotten is that, by an obvious arrangement, pictures may be photographed on the same plates with the letter-press. A drawing fresh from the artist may be introduced on the rack in front of the camera in place of cards, so as to make it appear as a part of the same page."

BEVERLY CHEW'S FIRST EDITIONS SOLD.

BEVERLY CHEW's collection of first editions of American authors, consisting of upwards of three hundred volumes, which had taken twenty years to form, was sold some weeks ago to Dodd, Mead & Co. The collection included the complete writings of Longfellow, Hawthorne, Thoreau, Lowell, Whittier, Emerson, Poe, Aldrich and others. The collection has since been sold en bloc; but the Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. are not at liberty to divulge either the name of the purchaser or the price paid. For ten years Mr. Chew has been interested in the collection of first editions of books of the Elizabethan era. One of his first purchases with the proceeds of his sale to Dodd, Mead & Co. is said to be a copy of the Shakespeare Third Folio—the most beautiful copy, so it is said, that book-lovers know. We sincerely hope some well-to-do purchaser will buy the set en bloc and feel generously disposed to give it into the keeping of a good library.

WHAT THE GERMAN WORKMAN READS.

A GERMAN clergyman has recently published the results of his personal investigation and of a comprehensive study of the statistics of circulating libraries to determine what is read by the working classes. The New York Evening Post summarizes these observations as follows:

"He finds, for instance, that there is nearly twice the demand for books on science and pure literature that there is for books on political subjects. Apparently such a circulation as 'Coin's Financial School' or the works of Henry George had in this country would be impossible in Germany. This confirms thoroughly the general impression of political inertness in the German masses. A racial tendency appears markedly in the large demand for popular books on science and philosophy. Haeckel and Darwin, for example, are in constant request. It is very doubtful if the statistics of our circulating libraries would show a similar bent for philosophy in the American workman. The novelists naturally carry the most votes. Here Zola, whose popularity diminishes, to be sure, leads all the rest. Jules Verne, who perhaps is reckoned as a scientist, is a bad second. The German classics are much read, with Heine far in the lead. Goethe and Schiller, Hauptmann and Sudermann are peers, so far as popularity is concerned. Spielhagen is in a class by himself, above the classics, but far below the sentimental and domestic Marlitt. What is most surprising is the demand for poetry. A Leipzig library, which excludes fiction, circulates each year among its patrons of the printing-trades as many volumes, chiefly poetry and the drama, as its shelves contain."

COPYRIGHT MATTERS. RIGHT TO REBIND BOOKS.

To clean old books, to cut off the edges of the leaves, and to rebind them is held by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, held at Chicago January 2, to be no invasion of the rights of a person holding the copyright for the books. The ruling was announced by Judges Woods, Jenkins, and Grosscup in reversing an order of the lower court, which had granted a restraining order against G. B. Doan and Hart Hanson, on motion of the American Book Company. The court, however, puts a proviso upon this ruling by a statement that the book so rebound, recovered, and offered for sale should have prominently displayed and stamped upon its cover notice that the book was a second-hand copy.

The American Book Company had complained that the defendants were selling old school books on which they, the complainants, had the copyright. The defendants had acquired hundreds of thousands of copies of the books in various stages of preservation. The court says: "We think that, so far as respects the copyright laws of the United States, no legal right of the appellee was invaded by so doing. What was done was merely the restoration of the books to their original condition when sold by the appellee, or so nearly so as could be done."

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION. THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE January dinner of the Booksellers' League was given at the rooms of the Aldine Association, 111 Fifth Avenue, on Wednesday evening, January 9. The attendance was large and all went off successfully. During the dinner the following telegram was received from the Canadian booksellers:

(Copy of telegram received.)

January 9, 1901.

Montreal, Quebec, 9.

MR. CASS RICHARDSON,
Secretary Booksellers' League,
Rooms Aldine Assoc., 111 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Canadian booksellers' greetings: aim high: twentieth century: labor overcometh all things: creditors have better memories than debtors: friendships multiply joys and divide griefs.

W. DRYSDALE, 6:04 P.M.

The telegram was enthusiastically received.

After the dinner Mr. Henry Mayer gave a very interesting "Chalk Talk," describing the characters met on an ocean liner. His caricatures in chalk on the board were received with much laughter and his impersonations were heartily applauded.

Since the last meeting the League has lost Mr. J. N. Wing, one of its most honored members and for a time its president. Mr. Butler read a tribute to Mr. J. N. Wing:

It is my sad duty to announce the loss of one of our most esteemed members, J. N. Wing, who died December 20, after a brief illness. To most of us his death came as a great shock, for very few knew of his illness. Nor did his family or physician imagine it would take so serious a turn. His death was sudden, and I only learned of it upon the day of his funeral.

Gentlemen, we have lost from our midst one whom we were all glad to call a friend, and who indeed really was one. Not superficially, but from the heart. If we have lost personally, our association has lost a great deal more. Probably no two members were more closely drawn together than he and I, for our labors for the League were so closely allied that it brought us almost in daily contact. For two years, during the early struggle of the League, when we had to give entertainments with no money to do it with, and had to rely upon volunteer effort, he was my constant aid and support. No matter how trying or urgent the situation, he was ever ready to throw himself into the breach and help out. I assure you this was not done for any self glorification or personal pride. For little or no glory attached to it. No. He did it all, and more, too, for the benefit of the Booksellers' League. The League was in his very heart and soul, and he labored for its success, harder perhaps, gentlemen, than any of you will give him credit for.

He talked little of his efforts, but I can assure you of my own knowledge that he labored incessantly for the advancement and glory of your association, and the latter days of his life were made happy by the final success and prosperous condition of the League. We shall sadly miss him in our counsel, at our board meetings, at our dinners, and in all the places we were wont to meet. I would urge upon each and everyone of us to emulate the example he has so nobly set, and be as devoted, as strong-hearted and energetic on behalf of the League as he, and I hope, in fact I know, that the memory of our departed comrade, J. N. Wing, will live always in your memory as one who had the interests of the League at heart, and who did all one man could do to bring it to success.

Mr. Butler called for a reading of the resolutions passed and adopted by the board, which met with approbation.

The resolutions adopted are as follows:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from among us our esteemed friend and first President, J. N. Wing, we, his associates and fellow-members of The Booksellers' League, desire to express our deep appreciation of the many and lasting obligations that we owe to him for his untiring efforts in furthering the best interests of The Booksellers' League and our calling; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of J. N. Wing The Booksellers' League has lost one of its most active and useful members, whose utmost endeavors were exerted at all times for its welfare and prosperity.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of the members be extended to his widow in her affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes and a copy transmitted to his widow.

Mr. Walter G. Cutter, Mr. Gilman, Mr. Kelley and others also testified to the loss suffered by the League and their personal esteem for Mr. Wing.

The date for the Annual Dinner was set for February 6, 1901. This happens to be the same evening chosen by the Stationers' Board of Trade. Perhaps upon consultation a plan will be made to change date and allow members to enjoy both dinners.

STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE DINNER.

THE dinner committee of The Stationers' Board of Trade have secured the Hon. John A. Taylor, Mr. James Rodgers and Mr. James Barnes as speakers and also expect acceptances from other guests of prominence. The dinner as already announced will be given at the Waldorf-Astoria on Wednesday evening, February 6. A reception will be held at half past six and the dinner will begin at seven o'clock sharp. It is hoped that the members will avail themselves of this opportunity to meet each other socially, to renew old acquaintance and make new connections.

ERASTUS DARROW FIFTY-FIVE YEARS A BOOKSELLER.

ERASTUS DARROW on the 1st inst. celebrated his fifty-fifth anniversary as bookseller and publisher in Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Darrow commenced selling books in the Yale College Bookstore of A. H. Maltby, at New Haven, Conn., on March 4, 1841, the day Harrison was inaugurated President of the United States. Three years later Mr. Darrow decided to try his fortunes in the West with Rochester, then only thirty-four years old, as his objective point. It required three days to make the journey. He arrived at Auburn on the second night, and reached Rochester at noon of the third day. He obtained a position in Clarendon Morse's bookstore, on the site of Paine's drug store, succeeding as clerk the late D. M. Dewey, who then commenced business on his own account in Reynolds' Arcade, at that time the most noted building in western New York. On January 1, 1846, Mr. Darrow opened a bookstore on his own account in the Minerva block, on the site of the present Merchants' Bank. James H. Gregory was associated with him for five years when his brother, Wallace Darrow, became his partner. In 1868 Henry Kempshall took Wallace Darrow's place, remaining up to the time of his death. When Mr. Darrow established himself in the book business Rochester had a population of not quite thirty thousand inhabitants, who were supplied with books by David Hoyt, William Alling, D. M. Dewey, Clarendon Morse, and Mr. Darrow. The population since that time has increased nearly eight fold and some of the largest book stores in the State are located in the Flower City. Mr. Darrow was one of the first subscribers to the University of Rochester and to the Genesee Valley railroad. Though born over eighty years ago, (in Plymouth, Conn.) Mr. Darrow is still active in business and takes a leading part in public and social affairs. In the name of the trade we wish our colleague many happy returns of the day.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MARIE PELLECHET.

Mlle. MARIE PELLECHET, the accomplished French biographer, died on December 11 at Louveciennes. For many years she had been devoted to a scientific study of incunabula, in which she exhibited not only unusual zeal but also a rare talent. The first volume of her chief work was published at Paris by A. Picard in 1897, namely, "Catalogue général des incunables des bibliothèques publiques de France." By her death the completion of this work will, no doubt, be interrupted, which is a fact that every specialist will deplore. Mlle. Pellechet's industry is signally shown by the following selection of titles of her works: "Notes sur les livres liturgiques des diocèses d'Autun, Chalon et Mâcon, avec un choix de leçons, d'hymnes et de proses composées en l'honneur de quelques saints spécialement honorés dans ces diocèses" (Paris : Champion, 1883); "Catalogue des incunables de la bibliothèque de Dijon"

(Dijon : Lamarche, 1886); "Notes sur des imprimeurs du Comtat-Venaissin et de la principauté d'Orange et catalogue des livres imprimés par eux, qui se trouvent à bibliothèque de Carpentras" (Paris : A. Picard, 1887); "Catalogue des incunables et des livres imprimés de la Bibliothèque publique de Versailles de MD à MDXX" (Paris : A. Picard, 1889); "Catalogue des livres de la bibliothèque d'un chanoine d'Autun: Claude Guillaud 1493-1551" (Paris : A. Picard, 1890); "Alphabet des imprimeurs du xve siècle" (Paris : Bouillon, 1893); "Catalogue des incunables des bibliothèques publiques de Lyon" (Lyon : Bernoux et Cumin, 1893); "Catalogue des incunables de la bibliothèque de la ville de Colmar" (Paris : Cercle de la librairie, 1895); and "Une Association d'imprimeurs parisiens au xve siècle" (Paris : A. Picard, 1897). V. H. P.

ALVAN SOUTHWORTH, the old-time journalist, author and traveller, died suddenly at 386 Third Avenue, New York City, on Monday, January 7. He was a man of many ideas and wrote several books, among which were "Four Thousand Miles of African Travel; a personal record of a journey up the Nile and through the Soudan to Central Africa;" and a "Life of General W. S. Hancock." From 1877 to the day of his death Southworth had no regular occupation save that of writing specials for newspapers and magazines. He was a fluent writer, spoke several languages, and as a conversationalist was one of the most entertaining of men. He was born in 1846.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

LOUIS HOW, the author of that entertaining story, "The Penitentes," is a grandson of the late Captain Eads, the famous engineer.

NATHAN HASKELL DOLE has given up his residence in Boston and settled down in New York in order to be in closer touch in his relations with Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.

"FOUR-LEAVED CLOVER" is the title of the new novel on which the author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland" is at work. It is to appear in this country in Lippincott's Magazine.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Evening Post of to-day contains a review of the century's progress. American literature is reviewed by W. P. Trent, and English literature by Edmund Gosse.

WITH the current number The Critic enters upon its third decade, an event which it appropriately celebrates by certain important changes in typography and make-up.

MR. J. A. STEUART retires with the close of the century from the editorship of the Publishers' Circular. Mr. Steuart is on the point of finishing his new novel, a love story with a military background, which Mr. Hutchinson will issue in February.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have in preparation a volume of the lyrics and ballads of John Williamson Palmer who, during the battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862, while serving on the staff of General Beauregard wrote the ballad, "Stonewall Jackson's Way," of which the late William Henry Hurlburt wrote that it and Mrs. Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," constituted "about the sole surviving poetry of the Civil War."

WHEN The International Monthly was established a year ago, the announcement was made that many of its articles would be reprinted in book form. The first fruits of this promise appear in the shape of a volume, now issued, which contains Senator Rambaud's monograph upon "The Expansion of Russia." The volume bears the imprint of the International Monthly, Burlington, Vermont, since the Macmillan Co. no longer act as the publishers.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS PRESS, Baltimore, Md., will publish at once a specially authorized and carefully prepared translation by Thomas S. Adams, of Professor E. Levasseur's work, entitled "The American Workman," edited by Theodore Marbury. Among the topics treated at length are: The progress of American industry in the last fifty years; the productivity of labor and machinery; labor laws and trade regulations; organizations of labor; the strike; wages of men; wages of women and children; factors determining nominal wages; real wages and workmen's budgets; and present conditions and future prospects of the American workman. The volume forms one of the series of Studies in History and Politics.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish this month a new book by the noted literary and Shakespearean critic, Edward Dowden, entitled "Puritan and Anglican," in which the author reviews the writings of Sir Thomas Browne, Hooker, Herbert, Vaughan, Milton, Jeremy Taylor, Baxter, Bunyan, the transition to the eighteenth century, etc. They expect to add to their English Readings series this month: "Selections from Pope," edited by Dr. E. B. Reed of Yale, containing the best representative pieces of an author who is better known nowadays by reputation than by reading, together with a selection from his letters; Burke's Speech on "Conciliation with America," edited by D. V. Thompson of the Sachs Schools, New York; Prose Selections from Swift's works, including "The Battle of the Books," "The Modest Proposal," "The Abolishing of Christianity," some of the "Draper's Letters," and parts of "The Tale of a Tub," edited by Prof. Frederick Prescott of Cornell. These additions bring the series to twenty-five volumes. In the department of History they announce a new work entitled "German and Swiss settlements in Provincial Pennsylvania," by Professor Oscar Kuhn; also a new and enlarged edition of W. D. McCracken's "Rise of the Swiss Republic," which is now used as a text-book in Harvard.

PICK-UPS.

THIS advertisement appears in a department store's column in a Richmond, Va., paper:

"Elizabeth and her German Garden," attributed to the Prince of Wales, two cloth-bound editions, 39 and 98c.

WHY KIPLING'S LETTERS WERE UNANSWERED.—"Rudyard Kipling's high-walled garden at Rottingdean contains some of the best of the few trees that grace the wind-swept village. One of these trees branching over the road threatened daily injury to the driver of the local omnibus. Therefore he and his conductor waged destructive war on all the vulnerable twigs within reach from the 'bus roof. Result—a vigorous letter of complaint from Mr. Kipling to the 'bus owner, who is also the landlord of one of the local inns. That evening the landlord laid the letter before the select company of the bar parlor. They advised an attitude of calm indifference. A Cæsus among them offered 10 shillings for the letter. Both advice and cash were accepted. The nuisance continuing, in due course a second letter arrived from Mr. Kipling, even more vigorous in tone than the first. The landlord convened another bar parliament, and 'calm indifference' was again the attitude determined upon. As befitted the increased violence in the letter it sold for £1. The landlord meanwhile uttered not a word. Next day in walks Mr. Kipling, very wrathful: 'Why didn't you answer my letter, sir?' 'Why, I was hoping you'd send me a fresh one every day. They pay a deal better than 'bus driving.'"—London Correspondence of Philadelphia Record.

The Perfection Series

OF CLOTH-BOUND BOOKS
at FIFTY CENTS each

Published by STREET & SMITH, 238 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK CITY

In presenting the Perfection Series to the public, we are aiming to make the line all that its title would imply—the most perfect line of books that can be produced to retail at fifty cents. In fact, these are dollar books in everything but price. An examination of the titles which follow will convince you of the merit of the works. The authors are well known and represent the most popular and successful of modern writers. Comment upon their popularity and fame is unnecessary, as they are all so prominently in the public eye that the reader who is up with the times is familiar with their names. Books in this series are all bound uniformly well and are the best value ever given to the public in a series of works retailing at fifty cents.

In ordering these by mail add eight cents extra per copy for postage.
